

Clothes from the Past/ Fashion through the Ages

- Year 1990's/2000:

Cargo trousers with pockets down the side were popular in the 1990s. Denim was popular with both men and women. Very low-rise jeans and cropped tops were in fashion in the early 2000s.

- Year 1980's;

White slip-on shoes were popular with men in the 1980s. Leggings worn under short floaty skirts were a popular choice for women. Jackets with big shoulder pads and rolled up sleeves were fashionable for both men and women.

- Year 1970's:

Trousers that started off tight but flared from the knee down were popular. Other clothing was floaty and bright. The Mini-skirts of the 60s were replaced by ankle-length ones known as maxi-skirts. Floppy hats with wide brims were popular for women to wear.

- Year 1960's:

The big fashion craze of the 60s for women was the mini-skirt. Tights had started being sold in the 1950s and were becoming more popular. Oversized bows and collars on dresses and blouses were popular. There were groups known as 'Rockers' who wore jeans, t-shirts and denim jackets.

- Year 1950's:

The fashion of the 1950s was still quite formal. Women frequently wore hats or head scarves and gloves. Although women didn't wear trousers as often as today, slim-fitting knee-length trousers called capri pants started being worn.

- Year 1920's:

Women's dresses became shorter and less restrictive in the 1920s. Women who followed fashions like the one in this picture were known as 'flapper girls'. The hat in the picture is called a cloche hat and was very popular in the 20s. Hats including ones called fedoras and homburgs were also in fashion. Some men wore whitecoverings called spats over their shoes.

- Victorian ERA:

Wealthy Victorian men wore suits with waistcoats. Bowler hats and top hats were popular. A pocket watch was often carried. Poor people's outfits had to be practical and hard-wearing. Clothes were dark as it was difficult to keep clothes clean in factories and mines where many poor people worked. Men and women wore hats or caps. Men took their hats off inside, women often kept theirs on.

- Stuart ERA:

Clothing for the rich during the Stuart era was very posh. Many clothes were made from silk brocade, a very expensive fabric. Men and women both wore curled wigs. Both men and women wore makeup.

- Tudor ERA:

Tudor men wore outfits called a doublet and hose. They wore white silk stockings and hats decorated with feathers and jewels. Skirts were worn over frames to give the shape shown in the picture. Clothing was made of linen, silk and wool.

The Era that makes Sense

- In this era (which makes sense) it is not about how crazy you look or how simply you look it's about a sports team. You generally see a kid out in the park playing (not now though) with a sports related t-shirt.

- There are also different t-shirts that represent something. Like a really awesome drawing or a text of words that are funny, sad, awesome, happy and ect.
- The last one is extra things to have. You could have a stylish cap for hot days or a nice warm wooly hat for cold days. Gloves for freezing days. Sunglasses for bright days.
